TUBEROUS BEGONIAS

One of the most beautiful and valuable summer and winter blooming plants for shady locations. Spring Hill offers the giant flowering, double Camellia type that blooms profusely and continuously. Nothing exceeds their brilliance, exquisite form and magnificent colors. They are excellent in the garden and easy-to-grow pot plants for indoor blooms winter and summer.

Begonias grow best in a light, well drained, rich soil. ⅓ sand, ⅓ rotted manure, ⅓ good, rich loam is the ideal begonia soil. Pot plants—water sparingly until leaves are well started, then increase water so soil is constantly moist but not wet. Set pot plants outdoors when danger of frost is past. Grow best in shady locations, under trees, shrubs in porch boxes, hanging baskets on north side of buildings. Bulbs can be used over many years. Dig in fall before freezing weather and store in slightly moist sand, peat or pot over winter. They are widely used for pot plants for winter bloom indoors.

When bulbs bloom you will wish you had ordered many more. Growing instructions sent with each order. American grown bulbs, 1½ to 2 inch are more expensive but we have found they are much more satisfactory than the imported bulbs, because they bloom quicker and are bred to produce mammoth blooms (many large as a coffee cup) are unsurpassed for bowl or saucer decorations in the home.

ROSA MULTIFLORA THE MIRACLE ASIATIC SHRUB

A Practical, Living Farm Fence

23H9 — A cheap, stock-tight fence, quick, at 40% less cost than woven wire fence. Do not compare with the old time, space, and labor wasting osage orange hedge. Multiflora rose is different—plant as a permanent hedge, but you need not trim and if you ever want to move hedge it is quickly destroyed with 2-4-D or by clipping.

The easily grown plants make excellent cover, nesting facilities, and provide winter food for wild life. The natural propagation and successful wintering of game assures a growing supply for sportsmen.

Recognized and developed by U. S. Soil Conservation Service. Trial fences have been planted in the East, South, Middle West, and North West and proven successful.

The attractive plants grow 6 to 8 feet tall and 5 to 7 feet wide. Present recommendations are to plant 1 foot apart in a single row for livestock fence. The general use of Rosa Multiflora is just beginning but its value for cheap fence, game management, windbreak, protection to soil and crops will last for generations.

Hardy, Azalea Mollis

Imported Large Flowering Strain — Our Holland grower is renowned for his superior strain of hardy Azalea Mollis. Many years of patient hybridizing and careful cutting resulted in wonderful pastel shades unequalled in brilliance and variety of colors by any other shrub. Their uses are almost unlimited as they work in borders, foundation plantings or planted in bold groups for masses of color. Plants withstand zero temperatures, growing well in Chicago, Detroit, and Des Moines, Iowa. They thrive in good garden soil and full sunlight or partial shade. We recommend mixing soils liberally with peat or rotted manure (see peat moss, page 10 in catalog). Also remove the fading flowers so plants do not seed, for heavy setting of bloom buds. Do not cultivate deeply as azaleas root close to surface. Acid soil is not necessary to grow Azalea Mollis but an occasional feeding with manure and acid peat will reward gardeners richly for the little extra care. The compact, round-shaped plants grow 3 to 4 ft. tall and bloom through May and June in such profusion the clusters completely cover the entire bush. Very superior to ordinary Azalea Mollis. Bushy plants about 1 ft. tall and broad with 6 to 12 canes set with bloom buds to flower in your garden this spring.
